THE CHINA MAIL.

HONOKONG, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1869.

WE notice that the new Merchant Shipping Bill carefully provides for the increased safety of the crews and passengers of ships, and it will therefore meet with the hearty approval of all except the selfish few who to save their own pockets are willing to risk the lives and property of their employes. We have not a copy of the bill in its entirety, our knowledge of its contents being confined to the extensive abstracts which have appeared in Mitchell's Maritime Register and other home journals. We are therefore unable to say whether additionally stringent regulations are imposed upon mercantile Masters regarding a matter which is becoming notorious in Hongkong-the proper condition of standing and running rigging. So far as we are aware, if a ship arrives without accident, or the necessity for a survey from damage incurred on the voyage, she is at perfect liberty to load and depart without any enquiry being made into the state.

of her rigging. Her lower shrouds may be fit only for paperstuff, the foot ropes of her yards stranded, her halliards as full of splices as a fish is of bones; but so long as she has escaped serious accident nothing is said, and we believe nothing can be done under existing regulations in this Colony. We can give the names of vessels which have come into port and left port again with their rigging in the state we describe. One in particular which we recall had some thirteen splices in her main topgallant halliards, the foot-ropes were decidedly unsafe, and the rigging of the ship generally was disgraceful. The crew refused duty when she arrived in harbor, but none of them alleged the real cause of complaint. It is possible that this was owing to the sailors' instinct tive dislike to make what he considers so serious an accusation against his captain.

But whatever the cause, we know of our own knowledge that this was one of the causes of complaint, though not stated in Court, and we saw with our own eyes the question of rigging only, as one that

No. 2005.—November 10, 1869.]

THE COUNT VON ATTEM. We purpose giving celebrity to an individual whose name has often appeared in our columns, not in connection with facts that are honorable to him. name is at the head of this article. mark his character, his name has been sometimes altered to "Count Von At 'Em." so indomitable seemed to be his pluck. though displayed somewhat objectionably. He has been a swindling advenvictims have been men of high as well as BAYS) "made use of his influence at some days absent, Quito on behalf of the honour of the British Government," and as a crowning stroke of his peculiar genius, he has induced the editor of the Straits Times to give him permission to tell his "Own Story" in the columns of that respectable journal, which devotes to his first chapter nearly four columns of its space. He dates from "Sourabaya Jail."-a fact which adds somewhat to the romance of his story—as he tells it. Our wonder is not lessened by the countenance lent to its presumed veraciousness by our contemporary. We recommend the case (so far as it has gone) to the attention of Mrs Harriett Beecher Stowe. The reproduction of the full history of Count Von Atten may prove as profitable to her genial pen as is her "true story" of passages in the Life of Lord and Lady

This young man, Attem, who confesses himself to be a great rascal and hypocrite, sets out with a lament that he had been described as a valet to the Count Attem who (the valet) had stolen his master's papers, albums, etc., and that he had consequently been subjected to the low gibes of his fellow prisoners, fromwhose persecutions he was unable to escape. We are sorry that we cannot devote to the Pseudo Count sufficient space to reproduce his adventures, which are at all events well told; whether truly or not is another question. But his capture may afford a useful hint to more than one of a similar fraternity who are cruizing about Eastern countries, and are better known than trusted by those they have deceived.

WE do not desire to be over inquisitive. But we should much like to ask one or two questions regarding Chinese agencies as relating to the sailors of our Mercantile Marine. A few days since our attention was arrested by seeing in the lane leading from the Praya opposite H. K. C, and M. Steam-boat Company's wharf to Queen's Road the following sign :-

牛 Shipping Employment Office, 利 Sailors, Cooks, Servants, Stokers, and coolie labour supplied and guaranteed.

Hong Yuen Tung Street, No. 15. We should like to ask-and we ask in the public interest-How comes it that even from licensed boarding-houses, Chinese are allowed to rival the legitimate agencies? It may be, we dare say it is, all right. But the notice suggests the idea that a very needless competition is allowed in this respect. We should furthermore like to ask whether the numerous Chinese shops which advertise so conspicuously the sale of 洋 酒 yang chow or "foreign wines" are licensed. That Jack can get drunk at their counters is sufficiently well known. Does he do so under a license to be "drunk on the premises?"

The Acting Attorney General, instructed by Mr Francis, appeared for the complainant; and Mr Whyte, instructed by Mr Hazeland, was for the defendant. The case excited some interest, and drew many residents together.

After a full hour's negotiation between counsel and attornies on both sides, the Acting Attorney (addressing the Bench) said he was glad to say that what was a very unpleasant affair had been arranged the defendant having made what he as counsel for Mr Torre Bueno, regarded as perfectly satisfactor yamends. H. R. H. PRINCE ALFRED AT CANTON. We have received the following from a correspondent at Canton :-H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburgh honoured this ancient city with his presence on Saturday, Nov. 6. Aware that the Prince was coming to Canton on the day in question, many of the foreign residents assembled at the Wharf of the Hongkong, Canton, and Macao Steamboat Company for the purpose of giving him a hearty welcome. At 3.30 p.m., the near approach of the Kinshan, containing H. R. H. and suite. was made known to the public by a flag being hoisted on the watch-tower, attached to the office of the Imperial Maritime Customs Service, and at a quarter to four, the steamboat, with its distinguished passenger. came alongside the wharf. The Prince on landing was received with cheers on the part of the foreigners, who were evidently much pleased to have an opportunity afforded them of bidding him welcome to the City of Rams. The sailors of the Feiloong were drawn up on the wharf in line, and, headed by Captain Francis, took up the cheer of the residents with a Hip! Hip! Ai-yah !--an ending to the familiar cheer which was rather comic. In the course of a few minutes, H. R. H. entered his state-chair, and accompanied by the Hon. E. Yorke, in number, were white dresses with yellow facings, and looked exceedingly neat. In my humble opinion, however, the bearers ought to have been eight in number, and their dresses and the trimmings of the chair of a red colour, as such, if I mistake

MR. R. HART'S NOTE ON MR. BURLINGAME. (Continued.)

MR. J. R. BROWNE'S REMARKS THEREON

Time is the essential element in all questions of progress. With China, to postpone a measure is to evade it indefinitely—the day of preparation never comes. It behoves each generation, in our age and under progressive civilization, to do its part; but the Chinese are content with what their ancestor sdid, and have no desire to better their own condition or bestow benefits upon their posterity. Mr. Hrat would have expressed the truth more clearly had he said that the mission was sent to the West to explain not only how difficult it is to introduce improvements in China, but how utterly impracticable without material changes in the present system of government. Innovation strikes at the very root of the existing system. Whatever strengthens central authority destroy to a certain extent provincial responsibility; and this is precisely what the Imperial rulers have resisted since the beginning of toreign intercourse. rejected the Lay-Osborne flotilla becauseobstacles were interposed by the foreign representatives to its use by the provincial Governors and subordinate mandarins; and they have invariably evaded that central responsibility which they are now willing to accept, since they have discovered an effective way of evading all responsibility-local, provincial and central.

own good time follow." That speech has been severely criticised, and it must be confessed that its language sounded strangely, read alongside of contemporaneous occurrences in China; it naturally suffers most when its parts are individually and separately commented on, and judged of from the standing-point of fact in the past, rather than from its general drift, which is, to suggest hopefulness in the future; but taken as a whole-and making allowance for the festive occasion on which it was delivered—the speech was a true and telling one when regarded as intended, to sum up what would result from a policy of fair play and non-interference, rather than to describe things as they now are, and thereon to build a claim for fair play. (N.) N.—This is, to say the least, a curious line of defence. All experiencies to be rejected; the existing condition of affairs in China is to be disregarded; neither the past nor the present | carates. Say, for instance, that his clerical is to be taken as a guide, but we are to build hopes for the future upon | vestments were completely worn out, and a policy not justified by any results hitherto obtained. If Mr. Hart's argument does not mean this, what does it mean? Mr. Burlingame's ed the meaus of replacing them; a man in selection proves that the Chinese have had fair play since the war of 1860 such a position could hardly be condemned -otherwise why did they select him? As to non-interference, the only for resorting to a method of raising means interference by foreign Government in the affairs of China since that date | if he honestly intended to meet the liabiliwas to suppress the Taiping rebellion and prevent the overthrow of the | ties he incurred; he could only be charged Manchu dynasty. Surely, this is not a legitimate subject of protest. with acting dishonestly when, to indulge What other interference has there been since 1860, except to ask for the extravagance in this respect or in execution of treaties? The treaties have never yet been enforced. The any other, he undertook to do more diplomatic correspondence for the past eight years shows that they than he could perform. But it is just have been persistently evaded both by the Central Government and at this point that many of the priests are by the local authorities; and that neither the one nor the other has ever | said to have sinned. in China. Is this universal testimony to be disregarded ! To whom are we to look for the truth if not to our own representatives, and to all classes who hold intercourse with the Chinese? And yet the Government of the United States, in July, 1868, adopted additional articles, practically granting the Chinese exemption from all existing obligations; and Lord Clarendon, in December, 1868, understood from Mr Burlingame that the Chinese Government were fully alive to the expediency, or even necessity, for their own interests, of facilitating and encouraging intercourse with foreign nations, etc., and fully admitted "that the Chinese Government were entitled to count upon the forbeatance of foreign nations." It might reasonably be asked what had been done by the Chinese to give them such an extraordinary claim to consideration and forbearance I All the testimony shows a persistent violation of treaties during a period of eight years, when there was no interference in their affairs, beyond the existence of the treaties themselves, save to suppress a rebellion which threatened the overthrow of the Government. With this experience before him, Mr Hart thinks it quite justifiable to say, "Leave China alone, and all that you wish for will, in its own good time, follow." Such a defence, a it seems to me, manifests a liberal desire to sustain all sides of the question, however conflicting, rather than a strict adherence to any established principle or policy. While he approves of non-interference, he thinks that if the public "will not see. how unfounded expectations [based upon non-interference] are, Ohina, fatally for herself, finds foes where all wished to be friends;" and this is a condition of things

MASS TRAFFIC.

A curious case of swindling was brought before a French police-court, which shows requirements of the public in this matter. K .- Here, again, reference is made to there are houses in Paris which undertake priests fell into the trap, and sent undertakings to repeat masses, leaving the number in blank. As the signatures werr genuine, the two persons referred to were able to discount these with the funeral furnishers or publishers who were intrusted with the fees and orders. But, instead of sending the vestments, or books, or whatever the priests desired to have in return for their promissory notes, they appropriated them to their own uses. They were also open to receive orders direct from the public, and there was no guarantee that they did not pocket here, on an intimation received from Consul a peculiar official character, it seems to be ed speeches of the leading statesmen and trial declared that his was a ready-money was no easy matter to get evidence against him, as the priests who had signed the bills of exchange were naturally reluctant to give evidence in a matter which, though it was inferior; in the list of these may be menfor 2,395, another for 9,381, another for amounted to 28,000 masses. So reckless, indeed, was one of these priests that he had signed bills to the amount of 100,000f. which at the current rate of 1f. a mass rendered him liable to the same number of masses; so that it may be imagined that if his creditors had come upon him in a body they would have been obliged to accept a composition. There is something to be said in excuse for these peculiar ecclesiastical bills in the case of some of the priests who took part in them. Take, for instance, the case of a cure in an out-ofthe way village, whose stipend would be despised by the worst-paid of English that neither he nor his parishioners possess-
